

Mokena Does Not Need Cop Says Mayor In Move to Oust Chief

Mayor Harry F. Mall of Mokena feels that it is not necessary for the village to have a policeman. He very definitely voiced his objections to retaining the present police chief Geo. Bennett on the village pay roll at the meeting of the village council Tuesday evening. Mr. Mall insists that the services of the police officer be dispensed with at once but the village board would not commit themselves on this proposition. The Mayor asked the Board what their opinion on the matter was but not a single word either in approval or disapproval came from any board member, whereupon Mayor Mall stated that he would not sign any more pay roll vouchers for the police chief.

The Mayor stated that traffic violations have occurred even tho the policeman was on duty.

On the other hand the village board is waiting for an ordinance which is being prepared by an attorney relative to the stop and go signs in the village limits. The question arising is can this ordinance be enforced without a police officer and if the ordinance is not enforced, the stop and go and slow signs would not answer their purpose and therefore would be useless.

Just what the outcome of the difference of opinion of the board members and the mayor will be, is not known at the present time. As the matter stands now, the mayor advocates the immediate dismissal of the village police officer while the village board is taking a non-committal attitude as to whether this should be done or not.

2 Benefit Basket Ball Games To Be Played - Mokena

The Mokena School and Alumni Basket-ball teams are sponsoring two basket ball games, Friday December 16th at 7:30 p. m., at the Mokena school gym for the benefit of raising funds to equip the gym with mats. These mats will be used for protection purposes under both baskets and along the front of the stage.

Many players have often complained of getting hurt by hitting the stage and the pipes used to support the basket. By having the protection of these mats, an injury to a player may be avoided.

The Mokena High School Basket ball team will play members of the alumni team who graduated during the last two years from the Mokena High School. The Alumni team will play the Tinley Park Heavy weight team. The spectators are promised two very exciting games and hope to have a large attendance. Tickets for these games will be on sale at Herbs Barbershop, Braun's Goodie Shoppe and Cooper & Hostert's garage.

The newly formed Mokena light and heavyweight basket ball teams have chosen the name of Mokena Alumni and will go by this same name from now on.

New Lenox Has Building Boom

New Lenox is enjoying a building boom. Eight new dwellings are under construction in the Brookwood subdivision. In addition to this two new taverns have been built, making ten new buildings.

DEAR SANTA CLAUS:

I have tried to be a good boy this year. I would like to have some of these things: Electric train, truck, drum, big wagon, set of dishes, little wooden house, table and chair, wind will, tracks.

That is all I can think of.

Frankfort To Have Community Christmas Tree

Mayor George Sangmeister of the village of Frankfort has invited the pastors of the Frankfort churches as well as the various church organizations and choirs to participate in and help build up a Christmas program to be held in connection with the annual community Christmas tree to be held on Saturday evening, Dec. 17th on the front street of Frankfort commencing at 8 p. m. Gifts for little children will be provided for.

Mayor Sangmeister for the past several years has been sponsoring a community Christmas tree and program which has always been a source of much enjoyment for young and old and it is hoped the annual Christmas party will be a big success as in former years.

Will Hold Indian Pow-Wow

A Navajo Indian PowWow will be held at the Navajo Fields Country Club at Worth on Saturday night, December 17th. This being a gathering of the Navajo tribe of good Indians the guests are being invited to come dressed in Indian costumes. A 25c fine will be collected from any one not wearing at least one feather. Prizes will be given to the best dressed Indian buck and squaw, also for the winners of the various Indian games of skill.

Dance music will be furnished by an Irish orchestra dressed as Hawaiian for this Indian party. At midnight comes the grand feast of Bar-B-Q cooked ala Mrs. Dunlap for fifty pieces of wampum.

A big New Year's Eve party is also being planned.

Will Hold Hasenpfeffer Party

An old time German style Hasenpfeffer Party will be held at Oswald's Grove on 159th street, a mile west of Wolf Road next Wednesday night, December 14th. There will be good music and a good time for all who come.

New Will Co., Officers Have Taken Office

All the new Will county officials took up their new offices Monday morning. Every office was filled with many beautiful floral bouquets. The new officers received the well wishes of their friends all day long. Probate Judge Fred Adams is back at the same desk he had when he served as judge a number of years ago.

In the county clerk's office Ivan Rhodes is holding the same job he had in the same office over eighteen years ago.

Frankfort Firemen Given Pointers By State Men

Last Monday evening Tom Brooks and Thood. Sife, officials of the State Fire Marshall's office in Springfield, instructed the Frankfort Fire Dept., how to get the best results out of their fire fighting equipment. They also showed them how to tie ropes, coils and other methods the firemen use. The Frankfort Fire Department bought 300 feet of 1 1/2 inch hose, a siamese, a spray nozzle and a set of nozzles recently. This is all new equipment. The annual meeting of the Frankfort Fire Department will be held Friday evening, December 16th at which time they will elect officers for the ensuing year.

Makes Horseshoes Used In Games

Peter Van Brussel, the popular "smithy" of Tinley Park is busily engaged manufacturing horse shoes used in horseshoe pitching contests. These horse shoes are made to certain specifications and weight but contain no nail holes as found in the ordinary horse shoes.

In addition to manufacturing this type of horse shoes he also is making a variety of sizes and shapes for the various riding academies of Chicago and vicinity.

HEY! GET OFF THE TRACK!

Await State O. K. On Water Main Extension

Mayor Harry F. Mall of Mokena, has received word from the WPA Headquarters in Joliet, that the Mokena water main extension project which has been hanging fire for well over two years, is finally going to be carried thru to reality. The only obstacle holding up the project now is the preparation of an engineer's map showing the location of all the water mains and connections in the Village limits which map must be transmitted to the state water board at Springfield for approval before any new water main extensions can be made.

Village engineer McCoy of Chicago Heights is now preparing this map and it is expected that the approval of the state water board will be received before long so that work on the project can be started. The extension of the water mains in question are along Wolf Road and also on First street. The new extensions will afford water supply to residents along these streets as well as fire protection.

Vehicle License Stickers on Sale

Everett Cooper, Mokena village clerk, has placed 1939 Mokena automobile license stickers on sale. These stickers being sold for $3.00 per year.

All automobile owners residing in the village are asked to purchase their stickers before the new year. Stickers may be procured from Mr. Cooper at the Mokena State Bank or at his home on Front street.

"I'm not quite ready. I'll tell you when to begin," I called up to Elizabeth.

With that, I pulled the screw-driver out of the crack in the wall and splashed my way to beneath the ladder of dogs. And there, with a frightful effort, I scratched away the filthy jacket of slime, in search of another interstice between the stones. I had not the strength to reach as high as I wished, and for two or three desperate moments I could not discover a joint; but at last my trembling fingers encountered the ghost of a crack and I managed to put up the blade and to push it a little way in.

I hardly hoped that it would hold me, but I could do no more: and I sank down and let the steel take my weight.

When I had rested a moment, I was able to push it further into the crack.

"Are you ready, my darling?"

"Yes. I'm ready," I said, and hoped for the best.

As will have been guessed, my primitive plan was this—to drive the tire-levers between the stones of the well and so climb up by them to the foot of the ladder above.

I watched my lady's stocking pass out of the light of the lamps, with the levers jingling within it to tell me how far they had come, and three or four seconds later, I guided them into the pocket adorning the breast of my coat. As I felt for the head of the stocking, to cast it loose, I found that it had been tied to a piece of flexible wire.

At once I lifted my voice.

"That's enough. How much cord have you left?"

"About eight feet, my darling."

"What is it made of, Elizabeth?"

"Two pieces of cord, the strap and some flexible wire. The last was in the tool-box, on an inspection-lamp."

I could have cried out for joy. Flexible wire will bear a considerable weight.

Again I addressed my lady.

"I want you to move the car; so that one of its wheels is directly in line with the ladder—say, five feet away from the well. Before you do this, hitch the cord round a statue, so that it doesn't fall."

"Very well."

Whilst she was doing my bidding, I unfasted the end of the "flex." Then with a shaking hand I got it about my body, under my arms. As I made it fast, I heard Elizabeth's voice.

"Yes, Richard? The car is there."

"Take your end of the cord and thread it between the spokes and so round the tire. Then, very slowly, draw it as tight as you can. When you hear me shout, make it fast by taking two or three turns."

"Very well."

A moment later the "flex" began to move.

I dared not ask too much of so frail a rope, and directly it took the strain, I called to my lady to stop; but though it could not have borne me, it held me up and, what was a thousand times better, it freed my hands. Before she was back at the head of that cursed well, I had hammered one of the levers into the wall.

Now I was not out of the wood by a very long way, but I knew that the lever would bear the whole of my weight; and this meant that, if I could manage to plant my other levers as rungs, I could emerge from the water which threatened me.

After working the matter out, I called upon my lady to loosen the cord.

Somehow I planted a lever beneath the water-line.

Since I had but three, this seemed a terrible waste, but I simply had not the strength to drag myself clear of the water without some support below. And when the business was done and the slack of the cord taken up, it was all I could do to reach the first lever I drove. And there I hung, like a man cast up on some shore, who knows what still lies before him if he is to save his life and doubts that he has the strength to get to his feet and stagger landward out of the reach of the waves. For I had to set one of my feet on the lever below, and, when it was there, I had to haul myself up—a terribly difficult movement, at any time.

Stand at the foot of a ladder of seven rungs—of which all are missing, except the second and fourth. Then take hold of the second and mount the fourth. . . . And I was not standing, and I was very tired. Of course, the trouble was this—that my levers were much too close. And yet I could not plant them farther apart; for without some foothold I could not work higher up, and in my exhausted condition I could not work lower down.

It was a very near thing. I never could have done it, without Elizabeth's help: for she handled the cord with such skill, always just taking the strain, but never taking my weight, that I depended upon her from first to last. When after a frightful convulsion I got a foot on to the lever, to hang, bent double, half in and half out of the flood: when the water clung to my body, as though reluctant to let go its lawful prey; when I made my last desperate effort to heave myself clear of its clutches and, keeping my foot on the lever, to straighten my knee; when I was up and standing against the wall of the well, and all the handhold I had was the lever a bare two inches above my knee; when I dared to let go of this and, bracing my thigh against it, put up my hands above me, to search the wall. . . . At these times, that poor cord saved me—and nothing else. And yet it must have broken, if once it had taken my weight.

Trembling, I straightened my back and put up my hands. . . . and met the last rung of the ladder shoulder-high.

Reaching up as far as I could, I could actually grip the last but two discarded the role which she had been ordered to play, and had selected a better and safer part.

To be short, "Monna Lisa" had fled—taking with her the best of all that Elizabeth had.

Her disappearance suited us very well, for we had our secrets to keep, and such a wolf in sheep's clothing was far better out of our way: and though the things she had taken were worth a good deal, their loss but served to remind us of what we had saved that night.

I made the most of the bathroom before I did anything else; but, of course, I had no dry clothes and, though I begged for my shirt, Elizabeth would not allow me to put it on. Instead, when I reappeared, she put a flask into my hand and bade me do as she told me or else go off to my bed. Since some things remained to be settled I let her have her way, but I could not help thinking of the strictures which would have been passed, if the Duchess knowing that you were involved. . . . And yet—

"My darling, what are you saying?"

I turned to meet Elizabeth's startled eyes.

Then she laid down her brush and came and put her hands on my shoulders.

"Can you get what I'm saying, Richard? Or are you all in?"

"I'm all right, my beauty, but I'm too tired to make plans."

"I'll make them for you," she said; "and now listen to me. When you leave this room, you must go by the way that you came. That is, by the picture-gallery. There you must pick up Winter and enter the tower. And so to bed. At seven Winter cancels the horses—you gave him that order last night, by my request. He calls you again at nine: but, because there is no one to call me, I sleep till ten. Then I find that Elsa has gone: and after a little I find that she's taken some of my things. But you don't even know that—because neither you nor your servant were out of the tower all night."

"Yes, I've got that," I said.

"It's vital, Richard—vital. If we say anything, we've got to say everything. And, except for Old Harry and Herrick, no one must ever know what happened tonight." She raised her eyebrows there and gave a little shake of her head. "I don't know what stuff I'm made of, but it hasn't upset me at all. Neither was fit to live—quite apart from the fact that you did it in self-defense. But the fact remains that you've been the death of two men. . . . and one of those men was the cousin with whom I have been brought up. . . . My darling, listen to me. It simply must not be known that the man whom I am to marry put Percy Virgil to death."

"Yes, I see that," I said somehow. "All right. I'll keep my counsel, and Winter will hold his tongue." I put my arms about her and held her close. "Kiss me good-night, my lady. The dawn will be coming up, and I want you to get to bed."

As I kissed her mouth, she took my head in her hands. . . .

"Good-night," I whispered. "Good-night, my beautiful girl."

I let her go, slipped into my sodden coat and laid my shirt over my arm. Two minutes later we stood in the picture-gallery.

By the light of the staircase-turret, I set up the eloquent harp. Then I turned to her standing beside me, picked up her little hand and put its palm to my lips.

"Sleep well, sweetheart," I whispered.

"And you, my dear. Look. I'll keep my door open until you get to the hall."

So she lighted me on my way. . . .

When I came to the head of the staircase, I purposely bore to the left, and an instant later a torch was flashed into my eyes.

"Well done, Winter," said I. "And now we'll go back to the tower. That's enough for tonight."

In my room I gave him his orders. One of these concerned the suit which I was so glad to take-off.

"Let no one see you do it, but when you can tomorrow, conceal this suit in the Rolls. And the next time I send you for petrol, stop in some lonely place, cut my name out of the jacket and burn the lot."

"Very good, sir," said Winter, blinking. "And—and what about this?"

"My shirt? Oh, that doesn't matter. Hang it out on—"

And there I stopped dead.

He was not holding my shirt.

What he was holding was one of Elizabeth's dainty chemises with which I had rubbed myself down.

(TO BE CONTINUED)

"I'm Not Quite Ready. I'll Tell You When to Begin."

of the dogs driven into the side of the well.

Be sure I tested the three as well as I could. Then I mounted my second lever and tested the fourth and the fifth.

Though rust had corrupted them all, they seemed to be sound, and since they were very thick and were almost certainly grappled behind the stones of the wall, I wasted no more time, but swung myself up.

Once I was on the ladder, I called my lady by name: and when she replied, I told her to drop the cord.

"I'm on the ladder," I said. "But I want to know where it stops."

"Just clear of the parapet, Richard."

"Stand still where you are," said I. "I'll come up and see."

It was as she said. The last of the dogs—or the first—was set perhaps six inches below the true rim of the well.

"Draw the cord tight," I said, "and then give me your end."

I passed this round my body and then threw it back.

"Put it round the wheel again and give it to me."

Again she did as I said: and again I passed it about me and pitched the end of it back.

"Now make that fast to the wheel, and then stand clear."

There was a moment's silence. Then—

"All right, Richard," she said. "Are you standing well back?"

"I am."

I took the five strands in my hand, and took a step up. The dogs were taking my weight, but the cord was holding me into the side of the well. I mounted step by step and hand over hand. As my head rose above the parapet, I saw Elizabeth standing with one of her hands to her throat.

Three more steps. . . .

Then I hung a leg over the wall and pulled myself in.

I was lying flat on the cobbles, with my head in Elizabeth's lap.

It was very near three o'clock when I berthed the car in the shadows which masked the entrance-drive at Brief, for now the moon was up and was refining the country on which, as we both believed, we had looked our last an hour and a quarter before. Ten minutes later, perhaps, we entered her staircase-turret and climbed its steps. . . .

Now I had advised that Elsa be told to dress and to be beyond Brief's verge before six o'clock—unless she preferred to be charged with attempted murder and almost certainly sent to prison for life: but, to our surprise and relief, her bed was untouched and she was not within the suite. In fact, it was very soon clear that, because she did not trust Virgil—and there she could scarcely be blamed—she had of Whelp had suddenly entered the room.

I suppose that one treasures for ever the gift of forbidden fruit; but I know that as long as I live I shall never forget the short, most intimate scene which brought to an end the drama in which we had played before. Less than an hour before, I had been fighting for life in Palfrey's terrible well: and now I was in Elizabeth's exquisite bedroom, sitting, with a flask in my hand, on the foot of Elizabeth's bed, while Elizabeth stood to her pier-glass, putting her hair to rights.

I met her eyes in the glass and the two of us smiled, and I saw myself beyond her, looking like any miner, about to begin his toil.

"High time I was gone," said I, and got to my feet.

Elizabeth spoke over her shoulder.

"As a matter of fact, I love to see you there. When we're married, you must always sit there when I'm brushing my hair."

Old Harry's words rang in my ears, and I turned away.

I must request your assurance upon one point. That is that you are aware that you cannot possibly marry the Countess of Brief.

I put the flask to my lips and when I drained it dry I put it back in the cupboard from which she had taken it down.

"What about tomorrow?" I said.

"I mean, if we can, we'd better keep out of the wet. Not that I care. If the police knew I'd bumped him off, they'd put their arms round my neck. But I can't bear anyone are the orange of marigolds, the yellow of mimosa, the blue of gentian and the red of salvia. Most orchids, on the other hand, are not pure colors at all.

"You can find every color in the world in flowers," he said, "and there are as many tones of green as there are varieties of color. Nature is the perfect artist and always provides exactly the right tone of green leaf to match the color of the flower. The flowers have to be matched in full bloom, for they change color slightly as they die away."

It is hoped that the color chart for flowers will be used in time by every horticulturist in the world, so that flowers of the same color everywhere will be described by the same color name.

Blushing Not Confined to Face Blushing is not confined to the face and neck. Anthropologists have found individuals, among primitive and semineude tribes, who blush as far as the waist, says a writer in Collier's Weekly.

Wilson found that there are about 3,000 different flower colors. He has named every one of them, tracing the most ancient historical names for the different colors. Examples of pure colors he found in flowers

Names are Selected for 64 Hues and About 3,000 Different Flower Colors

The task of examining and standardizing the colors of almost every flower in the world has been completed.

The work, which took three years, was carried out by Robert F. Wilson, art director of the British Color Council, working in co-operation with a committee of the Royal Horticultural society, writes a London United Press correspondent in the Chicago Daily News.

"My first task," Wilson said, "was to separate the full hues which are found in flowers. There are 64 of them, but there are many shades of each hue. I have examined 4,000 different flowers. They were sent to me by horticulturists all over the country. Then I have gone down to Wisley, the Horticultural society's trial grounds, to match up the colors of many empire and foreign flowers."

Wilson found that there are about 3,000 different flower colors. He has named every one of them, tracing the most ancient historical names for the different colors. Examples of pure colors he found in flowers

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

THIS Christmas it is not just the children who will receive dolls as gifts. Doll collecting is becoming a popular hobby for grown-ups. The most valued dolls are of whatever materials may be at hand and reflect the individuality of the person who made them. Rag babies of all kinds have an important place in such a collection. You will enjoy making the one shown here. Book 2 offered herewith also offers many suggestions for making and dressing dolls from scraps of materials.

If you want to make the stocking doll, clip these directions and keep them as this doll is not in either of the books offered here. The head and body are made of the foot of the stocking cut off where the heel begins, as shown. Stuff this part with cotton or bits of soft clean rags, sew across the bottom and then wind a thread around so that the toes of the stocking will form the head. Fold the leg and arm pieces lengthwise, stitch, turn and then stuff. Wrap thread around to make divisions for hands and feet. Sew the legs to the body, then add the skirt. The arms are sewn on top of the sweater piece and the sweater collar is turned over this sewing.

NOTE: Mrs. Spears' Book 2—Gifts, Novelties and Embroidery, has helped thousands of women to use odds and ends of materials and their spare time to make things to sell and to use. Book 1—Sewing for the Home Decorator is full of inspiration for every homemaker. These books make delightful Christmas gifts. Mrs. Spears will autograph them on request. Crazypatch quilt leaflet is included free with every order for both books. Order by number, 25 cents each book. Address: Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplains St., Chicago, Ill.

Friend in Deed

The book, "Men Who Run America," says: "Some 20 years ago, when the Edison laboratories burned down, Henry Ford arrived in Orange, N. J., the following morning. He handed Edison a blank check. 'Fill that out for a couple of million,' he said, 'and if you need any more let me know.'"

IT'S IN THE NEWS!

There are two classes of news in these columns every week (1) Interesting stories about events all over the world; and (2) the advertisements. Yes, the advertisements are the most important of all, because they affect you more directly and personally than any other.

● A new and better method of refrigeration is devised—and you learn about it through advertisements. Improvements are added to automobiles which make them safer than ever—again advertisements carry the story. Styles change in clothing—and advertisements rush the news to your doorstep. A manufacturer finds a way to lower the price on his products—advertisements tell you about the savings.

● You'll find that it pays to follow this news every week. Reading the advertisements is the sure way to keep abreast of the world . . . to learn of new comforts and conveniences . . . to get full money's worth for every dollar you spend.

NEVER SLEEP ON AN "UPSET" STOMACH

Neutralize excess stomach acids to wake up feeling like a million

To relieve the effects of over-indulgence—escape "acid indigestion" next day—do this: Take 2 tablespoonfuls of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia in a glass of water—AT BEDTIME.

While you sleep, this wonderful alkalizer will be sweetening your stomach... easing the upset-feeling and nausea... helping to bring back a "normal" feeling. By morning you feel great.

Then—when you wake—take 2 more tablespoonfuls of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia with orange juice.

That is one of the quickest, simplest, easiest ways to overcome the bad effects of too much eating, smoking or drinking. Thousands use it.

But—never ask for "milk of magnesia" alone—always ask for "Phillips' Milk of Magnesia."

How Women in Their 40's Can Attract Men

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 38 to 42), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of pep, dizzy spells, upset nerves and moody spells. Get more fresh air, 8 hrs. sleep and if you need a good general system tonic take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vivacity to enjoy life and assist calming jittery nerves and disturbing symptoms that often accompany change of life. WELL WORTH TRYING!

Lacking Discretion
Even great ability, without discretion, comes invariably to a tragic end.—Gambetta.

FOR HEAD COLDS

Relieve the discomfort—put 2 drops Penetro Nose Drops in each nostril—the astringent-like action of the ephedrine and essential oils relieves the congestion, permits freer nasal breathing. Soothing, cooling, quick-acting. Feel relief with every breath you take.

Patriotism does not consist in waving banners, or wearing uniforms, or belonging to societies, or denouncing other lands, or waxing eloquent about God's own country. It consists rather in exemplifying in the twentieth century, the ancient truth that "righteousness exalteth a nation; but sin is a reproach to any people." —Dr. Mary E. Wooley.

TINLEY PARK

Mrs. J. W. Worrell has returned from a visit with relatives in West Chester, Pa.

The village board will hold their regular monthly meeting next Tuesday night.

Building activities are progressing in the South Elmore subdivision.
Several new houses are under construction now.

John Hotschkin met with a serious accident last week when he got caught in a corn picker machine. His right leg was broken in three places.
He is a patient in the St. Francis hospital in Blue Island.

Mrs. Wm. Mancke Sr., is confined to her home following an accident.
She made a misstep resulting in a broken bone in her foot.

Carl Goebel, veteran Tinley Park pop manufacturer has been confined to his home with an attack of illness the past week. He is reported somewhat improved.

Geo. Bettenhausen is quitting the farm and will have an auction sale
Dec. 16.

PTA NOTES

Our December meeting was well attended last Friday. An amusing little Christmas sketch entitled Just Trash, was broadcast by pupils of Mrs. Buy's room and was thoroughly enjoyed by all.

Mrs. Sandidge announced that 1384 books have been circulated since the library was opened.

An invitation was extended by Mr. Clinebell to all parents to attend open house day on Thursday December 15. Come and visit the school and see how classes are conducted.
Mrs. Dean gave an interesting account of the meeting of the School Broadcast Conference which she attended at the Morrison Hotel. Broadcasting stations hope to improve their school broadcasts in order to make them more interesting as well as educational, but they must have the cooperation of the schools, in order that they may know how the programs are being received.

A new chairmanship has been added to our staff. Mrs. Rogers was appointed student Aid chairman.
Her duty will be to aid students in our school who lack the necessary clothing and books to attend school.
She will be glad to receive outgrown clothing that is still in good repair.

Just a reminder about your candy donations for the minstrel show.

We had a very interesting talk by Mrs. Elsie Urist, from the Chicago Public Library, on "Children's Reading". She gave brief outlines on a number of good books for boys and girls. The singing of several Christmas Carols brought our meeting to a close. Erna Wallin, Pub.

METHODIST HI LEAGUE

Six o'clock Sunday evening the cabinet of the High School League met in the parsonage. A month's work was planned.

Dec. 18 the second Dept. will present a play, "The Story of the Three Kings" at 8:00 p.m. in the parsonage.

Our fourth Dept. says "put a ring around Dec. 21 because there will be a big Christmas party in the home of Mrs. Weinreich.

On Christmas morning promptly at 6 o'clock the entire league will meet at church and go forth to sing the glad carols to the sick and shut ins. After the singing is finished we will return to the church for a real Christmas breakfast and remain for Sunday School and Church services. There will be no League Dec. 25.

Jan. 1st the first department will sponsor a candle light and dedication service. This promises to be a very beautiful way to start the new year. After this meeting we are invited to the parsonage for refreshments. Our officers elected for a busy year are as follows: Pres. Ruth Lundstrom, Vice pres., Vernon Brandau, 2nd vice pres., Marvin Bettenhausen, 3rd vice pres., Irene Lahti,

I've Learned To CROSS ONLY AT CORNERS

Issued by the CHICAGO MOTOR CLUB

Pictures in brilliant brown and yellow, those well-known nursery-rhyme characters, the Mama Bear, the Papa Bear and the Little Bear give a lesson in safety on the December poster distributed to 35,000 classrooms in Illinois and Indiana by the Chicago Motor Club.

As his parent, starts to cross the street in the middle of the block, the Little Bear objects. "I've learned to cross only at corners," he says to the older bears who are looking at him quizzically, "lets go there."

This picture now on display in schoolrooms is a part of the safety campaign which the motor club is sponsoring in primary schools thru out the two states. Educators report that children of all ages are taking more interest in safety than ever before because the colorful posters featuring familiar characters hold their attention.

In connection with the posters which are sent each month to schools throughout the two states, questions and problems are sent to teachers which pertain to the object lessons enacted in the illustrations. These are worked and discussed in regular class periods in conjunction with small objects as history and civics.

FAMOUS FAREWELL RE-CREATED BY PAINTING

Copyright 1938 - Lincoln National Life Insurance Co.

"Lincoln's Farewell to his Stepmother" by Frederic Mizen

WHEN he was President-elect, and the most important figure in the nation, Abraham Lincoln set apart three days from his task of selecting a cabinet in order to visit and say good-bye to his aged stepmother in Illinois. "Lincoln's Farewell to his Stepmother" is depicted in the above painting created by a pre-eminent artist, Frederic Mizen, for the Lincoln Museum of the Lincoln National Life Insurance Company in Fort Wayne, Indiana.

On the morning of January 23, 1861, according to Dr. L. A. Warren, director of the museum, Lincoln boarded a Great Western train at Springfield, changing to the Illinois Central road at Tolono. He then continued on to Mattoon, only to find that the last train bound for Charleston over the Terre Haute and Alton road had already departed. He waited for an evening freight train and traveled the remaining distance in a caboose. Staying in Charleston that night, he secured a horse and buggy early the next morning and drove the eight miles to Farmington where his stepmother resided.

Slow trains, bad connections, and horse-drawn vehicles offered no barriers to Lincoln in paying his last respects to one who has been called "the finest stepmother in all the world."

Bugle Calls

By Zeb Potter

Burned! Tortured! That was the painful experience last week of the daughter of one of our citizens living on a farm north-east of Mokena.

About a month ago, Zeb Potter in this column wrote on rural crime and mentioned how the eastern states are educating people to defend themselves against criminals.

It's high time that some crime prevention work be done here. Chicago is just an hour's drive for some vicious hoodlum to come out and commit another crime in our midst. The police squad cars are driving these "human wolves" off the streets so they are going out to farm areas to prey on people.

St. Clair County, Illinois, is just across the state line from St. Louis. The crime rate in this county was too high. The people got busy and crime has been cut eighty per cent.

In Bureau County, farmers lost to thieves 534 hogs, 32 cattle, 3,292 chickens, 715 bushels of corn, nine bushels of clover seed, a truck, and $390 in cash. These figures are from the State Crime Prevention office at Springfield.

Since it is impossible to station a constable at every farm and cross road, the plan adopted by the Warden of the State Prison at Joliet must be adopted. When a prisoner escapes guards are assigned to important intersections to examine cars and trucks.

We need that system in this neighborhood. Our people on farms should not be sacrificed to vicious criminals, if some intelligent system to catch marauders before they get away could be worked out.

In each town in this vicinity we have local clubs and Parent-Teacher organization. I would suggest a joint meeting of these civic clubs. Invite the newly elected sheriff to attend. Have a man come up from Springfield from the State Crime Prevention office. Work out a plan to make this neighborhood unhealthy for hoodlums who go about burning people to rob.

That's all this week.

—ZEB POTTER.

PALOS PARK

Gustav Johanson, Scoutmaster and Fred Stockdale, Assistant Scoutmaster, of the Palos Park Scouts, Troop 699, were graduated with their class at the Southwest Training Course of Boy Scout Leaders at Gage Park.

Having received their certificates and after five sessions of hard work in the "Busy Bee" Patrol, Johanson and Stockdale intend to study further in this game of Scouting.

The "Busy Bee" Patrol of which Gustav Johanson and Fred Stockdale were members was the only patrol having the living totom. An observation hire of bees was donated to the class by Leroy Stockdale.

The other patrols were: "Green Hornets," "Jitterbugs," "Pioneers," "South Shore" and the "Rattlesnake."

Palos Boy Scouts held a Tenderfoot candle light service last Friday evening at the Palos Park Community Church for Werner Itzel, Joseph Lamplot and Jack Coffey. This was one of the most colorful services that has ever been held by Troop 699 since their organization.

The company was conducted by George Raftery, Gustav Johanson, Fred Stockdale, and Phillip Sippel.

Palos Boy Scout Leaders went on an overnight hike last Saturday and Sunday, which was held at Camp Kiwanis, to gain elements of Scout Leadership, Part III. Despite the weather there were twenty scouts present at the hike.

Mr. Carl Handel, the Southwest District Executive who has worked in the Canadian Wilds for the Hudson Bay Company, instructed the Scout Leaders about cooking a meal without the required utensils or bothersome job of stirring the meal over the fire. The meal was baked in the coals of the fire.

The two Scout Leaders that took the course at Camp Kiwanis are required to take their Troop Officers on an overnight hike which is scheduled for December 17 and 18 which will be held at Camp Kiwanis.

The Leaders who are to go are: Gustav Johanson, Scoutmaster; Allen McClain, and Fred Stockdale, assistant Scout Master; George Raftery, Senior Patrol Leader; Clem Dunlap, and Harold Johnson, Patrol Leaders; Donald Tourtelot, Scribe and any of the Troop Committeemen that wish to attend.

Palos Boy Scout Troop 699 will have a meeting at the Church next Friday evening. A hobby display is planned. The most popular hobby among the troop is wood working. A hobby period is planned to be held during the meeting so the scouts can work together in the various hobbies of most interest. As soon as the scout are better prepared with their hobbies they have planned to have speakers for the various subjects so as each boy can have the chance of learning more about his hobby.

Mr. Walter Witt of the Palos Riding Stables is building a new barn.

Mr. Martin Olson has completed his garage and is busy building a house on 87th avenue.

The regular quarterly meeting of the Sunday School board of the Palos Park Community Church held a meeting at the church last Wednesday evening. Plans for the Christmas program were discussed.

Clarence and Owen Creer, and Fred and Ruby Stockdale attended the stock show last Thursday evening. Mrs. Leroy Stockdale and Ruth Walker attended the stock show on Thursday afternoon.

Mr. Wesley Wadsworth was recently united in marriage to Miss Margaret La Bine, both of Palos Park.

Palos Junior girls club met at the home of Miss Shirley Haack last Friday evening. The girls are doing embroidery work for their next social event.

A bake sale was given last Saturday at Art Kotrba's Food Shop by the Palos Juniors.

Cook Co., School Districts Insurance Rates Increased

School districts in Cook County found their insurance rates increased from 55 to 125% as the result of an Insurance Code passed by the last General Assembly, it is stated in the third part of a study of school finance trends made by the Lake Shore Division of the Illinois Educational Association.

"Prior to the passage of this Code", the report states, "it was possible for the schools of Cook County to call for bids on building and equipment insurance but the passage of this legislation prohibited the continuance of this policy and forced insurance companies to charge according to the rate established for a particular building."

Three typical rate changes are cited. One school which paid $480 yearly under the old rate had a new rate of $742.50. Another school found its yearly premiums upped from $2,520 to $4,632. For a third the annual bill jumped from $1,482 to $3,335.

"If insurance companies have been carrying schools at no profit or at a loss under the old rates, then logically the increase in rates is fully justified," the report concedes. "On the other hand, if the old rates carried the risk nicely and paid a comfortable margin for administration and profit, the increase in rates should be openly questioned by those who are responsible for the expenditure of public school funds."

In this connection the investigation disclosed that in 31 schools over a period of 10 years—310 years of insurance—there was paid $304,- 006.43 in premiums. Of these schools 11 collected claims totaling $120,-549.72 or 39.4 percent of the premiums paid.

"Of course", the report adds, "there are those who will say that insufficient cases were included to draw conclusions. But in a national study it was found that insurance companies pay back annually in all claims 51.4 percent of the premiums and they pay back to schools 28.7 percent of the premiums, though in fire resistive construction in schools the amount paid back for losses is but 8.76 per cent. These national findings would indicate that the Cook County findings, if extended, would show even less than 39.4 percent of the premiums paid back to schools in claims."

From data supplied by 13 school districts, the educators making the school insurance study computed that whereas the per pupil cost for insurance averaged 68 cents per year under the old rate, it would rise to at least $1.05 under the new rate.

After studying the facts uncovered, the investigating educators asked three questions: 1. If national figures show that school buildings are better than average risks, why should the law deny insurance companies the right to reflect this better risk through insuring school buildings at lower rates?

2. If, under the old rates, the insurance companies kept for administration and profit 60.0 percent of the premiums, what justification was there for the Assembly to pass a Code requiring an increase in premiums of from 55 to 125 percent.

3. If school districts are forced to pay too much for building and equipment insurance and this amount can be reduced to a justifiable amount, why isn't this money saved as valuable as additional state aid?

The investigators, therefore, list three possible courses of action:

1. By cooperation with the insurance companies of the state an act could be passed allowing better rates for school buildings as preferred risks.

2. Legislation could be passed which would make it possible for school districts to cooperate in carrying their own risks, thru reserves.

3. Since education is a function of the State, Illinois could decide to carry its own risk on school buildings, just as it now does on other state buildings.

About 94 guests partook of a delicious pheasant dinner recently at the George Yunker tavern.

Herman Uthe has taken up a job at Sterling, Illinois.

The Adult Bible Class of the Orland Park M. E. church will hold their monthly meeting in the church parlors Wednesday evening, Dec. 14.

Word comes from Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Newcomb and Mrs. John Helenhouse and son Harold who are sojourning in Florida, that they are thoroughly enjoying their stay. Harold has already gained four pounds during his brief stay in the sunny southland.

The Orland Park village board will hold their semi-monthly meeting next Tuesday evening.

BASKETBALL NEWS

Basketball is now in full swing in Orland. A few games were played by the various teams. The High School last Friday traveled to Mokena and defeated the latter by a score of 36 to 24. The game was very well played with Davidson and Brennan holding the scoring honors. It was the High School team's 2nd victory against no defeats.

Sunday afternoon the Orland light weights and heavies traveled to Mokena to play two games. The lights played a nice brand of ball and won by the score of 26 to 24 in a very thrilling hard fought game. H. Uthe again led the Orland attack with 5 baskets and 4 free throws for 14 points.

The Lights have been working very hard and it looks like they will have a good team. Line up for Sunday:

Orland, 26	G	FT

Total	11	2

The Heavyweights made it three in a row this year as they defeated Mokena by the score of 34 to 28.

E. Uthe again led the heavyweights as he sunk seven baskets for a total of 14 points. Hallinan and Steinmetz were next with three baskets and one free throw each.

Orland with its height should prove to be a very hard team to beat this year. The lineup for Sunday was

Orland 34	G	FT
T. Uthe, F	7	0
Hallinan F	3	1
Steinhagen C	1	0

Mrs. Arthur Beagley, Mrs. Robert Yunker, Mrs. Albert Lowens, and Miss Marie Yunker attended the shower given in honor of Miss Sylvia Yunker, at the home of Mrs. John Blume at Tinley Park, last Tuesday.

Mr. Fred Yunker is recovering from an abscess on his shoulder, which had to be lanced.

ORLAND PARK H. S. NEWS

The second meeting of the Duodecimum Club was held last Friday afternoon. As praetors, those who are in charge of the honor point system and award the winners, Lois Strong and Roy Carlson were elected.

The aediles elected, those who manage the programs and entertain, are Mildred Doctor, Violet Ferry and Norman Creveling. As consuls, Philip Sippel, Alma Wozniak and Melvin Ballou were elected. They are auxiliaries to the aediles. It was decided to have a regular meeting of the club once every two weeks. Also dues of ten cents a month will be paid by each club member. The money from dues will be used to purchase project material.

A Dramatic club was formed last week with the purpose of interesting students and giving them practice in public speaking. One three-act play will be presented this year, but since everyone in the club can not have a part in that, other opportunities will be provided. There will be one-act plays, vaudeville sketches, dramatic readings, orations and debating. Some of the club meetings will consist of study groups on such subjects as "Lighting Effects", "Sound Effects", "Costumes", "The Art of Make-Up for the Stage", "Pantomime" and "Hints about Acting." The following officers were elected: President, Norman Yunker; Vice-president, Eleanor Knox; Sec. Arthur Uthe, Treasurer, Clifford Horn. The high school will have a Christmas party at which there will be an exchange of gifts. Names were drawn last Friday.

The Girls' Glee club will have a Pot luck Luncheon on Wednesday, Dec. 21.

JUNIOR RED CROSS MEETING

The school children members have asked if they might fix a Christmas basket for a worthy family or child and so at the regular meeting held in the school Tuesday after school, it was decided that each child who was able, could bring whatever they or their parents wanted to give toward basket. Suggested articles are: mittens, hankies, oranges, apples, pop corn, canned fruits or vegetables, jellies, jams, cookies candy, groceries. These are to be brought to the school December 14 and 15.

RED CROSS FIRST AID CLASS

The first meeting of the Mokena First Aid class was held in the school Monday evening with a nice attendance. Much of the time was spent on organizing and no regular lesson was given so that if there are any who still would like to join the class by coming next Monday evening at 7:45, in the school, they would still be in time for the first lesson.

SCHOOL NEWS

Primary Room
We are happy to have Billy McGregor and Elwyn Donaldson back after absences of two weeks.

The room is attractively decorated with Christmas pictures. The front border has pictures of candles and the back border has pictures of Santa Claus and his reindeer flying over the tops of houses.

The children of this room are busy learning songs for the Christmas program.

Intermediate Room
This room is decorated attractively with posters and pictures made by the pupils. On the back board is a drawing of a fireplace made by Billy Homering and Elwin Schoeneck. Another space has a picture of a Christmas tree and two angels made by the boys named above. Richard Lauffer has returned to school after a long absence due to illness. The pupils are all busy practicing for the Christmas program.

The members of the Junior Red Cross are bringing old toys to the home of Mrs. McGuire.

Junior High Room

The Junior High Room was very glad to see so many parents out for their afternoon assembly. Some very fine booklets of the story "Evangeline" are on display in our room. Gordon Clevenger has a very splendid Christmas drawing on one of our black boards.

High School

The English II class is studying "The Life of Samuel Johnson" by Macaulay this six weeks. The botany class is studying the topic "Mosses" and the pupils are making some interesting outlines and pictures. Several of the high school students attended the International Livestock Exposition in Chicago during Thanksgiving vacation.

The Junior High and High School girls have organized a pep club for cheering at the basketball games. The Junior girls will wear purple and white and the High School girls will wear green and white. Virginia Nebeker, Lillian Hellmuth and Clara Stankus are the leaders.

Sport News

The Grade School and High School basketball teams have each won two games and lost one since the season opened. The Grade School defeated Manhattan and Orland and lost to Manhattan in a return game. The High School defeated Manhattan twice, but lost to Orland last Friday night. The boys are showing a lot of pep and spirit this year, and all the games have been full of thrills and excitement.

Administrative Report

Attendance for November was: Primary Room, 97 per cent; Intermediate Room 95 per cent; Junior High, 98 per cent; High School, 97 per cent. Three cases of tardiness in Primary room, one case in Intermediate Room, none in Junior High and two cases in High School.

Over the Counter
1939 Auto Licenses
On Sale Now

Over the counter sales of 1939 automobile license plates started this Thursday at the Springfield and Chicago offices according to a statement issued by the Automobile Department under Secretary of State Edward J. Hughes.

Reassignments of numbers to their present holders on their request are now being sent out and the Automobile Department states that these will now have been issued in entirety by the middle of next week.

In announcing the counter sales opening John J. Nash, chief clerk of the department urged public co-operation.

"Our offices both at Springfield and Chicago will give every service possible. The issuance of license plates is early this year and we urge motorists to take advantage of the opportunity of getting the routine of licensing out of the way with dispatch. Those who wish counter service should get their licenses now and avoid the rush at the deadline period."

"Every assistance will be given at the Springfield and Chicago offices in advising motorists on the procedure in getting the new Drivers' license."

License fees for 1939 are the same in each class as they were in 1938.

U. S. Appeals For Vigilant Pan-America

Lima Conference Opens Amid Trade Overtures of Dictator Lands.

By JOSEPH W. LaBINE

For several thousand miles south of the Rio Grande lies a chain of nations whose political and economic experience is minimized in the average United States mind. This is Latin America. With the United States itself, these nations of the Western hemisphere, of both North and South America, form what men have chosen for years to call Pan-America.

Right now the leaders of Pan-America are meeting in Lima, Peru, for their eighth conference, designed to solidify the Western hemisphere into a solid bloc of friendly nations. In 1933, when last they met, these men could discuss their subject calmly, sincerely and without fear. This year it is different because the dictator nations of Europe and Asia are threatening Latin America's security.

This threat has been growing with every month, and to a large group of American citizens it makes the United States' Pan-American policy, as voiced by President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Cordell Hull, seem selfish and unrealistic. These are strong charges.

Selfish? Unrealistic?

Under the Monroe doctrine, Washington has promised to defend any Latin-American country from European or Asiatic aggression and to exercise a parental interest over our younger "democratic" neighbors to the south. This was no more than any smart business man would have advocated, for by guaranteeing South America's integrity we protected our own commercial interests in Pan-America and eliminated the danger of aggression from the south. Some men called this selfishness and "dollar diplomacy." President Roosevelt's policy is substantially the same but it is not selfish. Since the rise of Hitlerism and Fascism, since Japan became a dominant world power, South America has been infiltrated with propagandists. Our trade with Brazil, for example, has dropped below that of Germany. The dictator nations are attempting to fasten an economic grip in the Western hemisphere and this would almost certainly have a political influence. As a world power the United States has a right and obligation to defend both the principles of democracy and its trade with foreign nations.

But there may be some truth in charges that the Roosevelt-Hull policy is unrealistic. We claim to be defending the "democratic" nations of South America, yet democracy has already flown from several of these countries. Mexico, which has never been active in Pan-American affairs, lives under a communistic dictatorship that has seized American farm and oil lands. A leftist regime has recently taken possession of Chile. Brazilian and Dominican governments both exhibit dictatorial tendencies of one sort or another.

RIGHT OR WRONG?—One of the greatest statesmen of his day, Cordell Hull now bends his efforts to winning Pan American friendship. Critics, fearing inroads already made by Germany, Italy and Japan in the lands to our south, charge Mr. Hull's policy is "unrealistic."

Just how such nations can be banded into a Pan-American union for defense of democracy is hard to understand, yet the resolute and sincere Mr. Hull is striving for that very objective. Though admittedly idealistic, he has accomplished great things with the reciprocal trade treaty program under which 20 pacts have already been signed. The Hull aim is to break down international trade barriers and bring about greater stabilization of world currency.

U. S. Seeks Hemisphere Defense.

Unlike most conferences of its kind, this year's Pan-American meeting is not dealing with generalities and platitudes. It will settle, among other things, the boundary dispute between Peru and Ecuador.

In this connection the union can gloat over its successful arbitration of the Gran Chaco dispute between Bolivia and Paraguay, settled only a few weeks ago.

But the bulk of interest will center around developments following in the wake of Germany's Sudeten aggression and her persecution of Jews. As an upshot of this threat to world security, President Roosevelt plans to ask congress for funds to throw a ring of defense around the entire Western hemisphere, an $8,000,000,000 rearmament program that would require five years for consummation. He proposes that Central and South American countries shall co-operate in providing operation bases for United States naval and aviation units.

Hull Stresses Diplomacy.

Mr. Hull, who leads the American delegation to Lima, has not committed himself definitely on this rearmament program. In fact he is not expected to mention military preparedness, preferring instead to urge amendment of the Western hemisphere "consultation pact" adopted at the Buenos Aires peace conference of 1936. Under the Hull plan, a permanent committee of foreign ministers from each Pan-American country would be empowered to consult immediately by telephone, telegraph or meeting at any time a threat to American peace is imminent.

Though idealistic, Mr. Hull has suffered enough disillusionments from treaty breakers the past few years to know that signatures and pledges mean very little in themselves. But he does know that the United States has seldom been forced to reprimand another Pan-American nation for violating its solemn pledge. Hence he believes the Western hemisphere peoples have a common bond and are willing to live together peaceably.

Unrealism Again.

But this, say his opponents, is where Mr. Hull uses the wrong tactics. It is fine to shake hands, smile and make speeches about brotherly love, but is it a sufficiently aggressive policy to counteract propagandizing and the economic encroachments of dictators? One of the state department's chief critics in this respect is Carleton Beals, whose "The Coming Struggle for Latin America" was recently published by J. P. Lippincott company of Philadelphia.

Most South American nations, says Mr. Beals, believe Germany is the coming world power because it has gone to every corner of the earth to tap markets and make alliances. There are today more Germans than Americans in South America, and the Germans are more popular. This situation has resulted from propaganda, formation of bunds and activities of the dreaded German Gestapo or secret police. Every day South American nations are deluged by world press reports emanating from government radio stations in Berlin. These reports lose not a single opportunity to glorify totalitarian states to the discredit of democracies.

Yet Mr. Beals' proposed solution is not far from that of Mr. Hull. The barrier to dictator propaganda will not be American counter propaganda, our countertrade drive nor our sale of American munitions in the name of peace. Instead, he says, the barrier lies in "the natural patriotic resistance of the Latin American people and governments to outside meddling . . . the real bulwark in Latin-America against alien ideologies, including our own, is the people themselves."

CARTER FIELD

Chief topic of conversation is whether Roosevelt wants a third term, and whether he can get it if he does want it
... Harry utilities on income tax returns ... World indignation aroused over Hitler's treatment of Jews.

WASHINGTON.—As senators and members of the house drift back to Washington following the campaign, either to take up committee work or get themselves settled for the session to open in January, the chief topic of conversation is whether President Roosevelt wants a third term, and whether he can get it if he does want it.

Right after the Roosevelt defeat on the purge campaign against senators who had opposed the White House on the Supreme court issue, there was a general conviction that every time he lost a purge fight the President made his own nomination for a third term more certain. The theory here was that the President would not be able to control the organizations of his party in the states in which he had lost these battles, and that therefore he would not be able to dictate the nomination of a man, as for instance Harry L. Hopkins, who would be certain to carry out the New Deal policies.

Therefore, it was figured, the President would feel that the only way in which he could be sure of having the New Deal policies carried on would be to take the nomination himself. It was also felt that if the President were driven to this conclusion, which most observers seemed to think inevitable, the convention would not dare refuse him.

Since the election, and the more formidable showing of the Republicans than had been expected, a little doubt has begun to creep into this logic. Returning members of congress have told one another that they found Roosevelt himself considerably less popular than they had supposed. They figure the drift is against him, and might easily reach a disastrous level, from the standpoint of the Democrats, by 1940. Nearly all of them admit that the President could have been re-elected had he been running on November 8, though a few inject the modification that they are not certain to what extent the prejudice against a third term would affect this.

Sentiment Found Moving Slowly Against Roosevelt

But the point is that all politicians realize that public sentiment seldom stands still. It moves one way or the other. For many months now it has been moving slowly against Roosevelt. There is no indication that the tide has turned. It might turn next month and find the President stronger than ever in 1940, but, most observers admit, that would be a freakish development. The natural swing of public sentiment runs with almost the regularity of the tides.

Roosevelt reached flood about Christmastime after the election of 1936. His tide began to ebb in January, 1937, with the Supreme court proposal. It has not gone low enough yet to endanger him. The only question is where it will stop.

Now the actual truth about all this is not so important—or will not be until election day. What is important is what politicians think is the truth. If the rank and file of the politicians of the Democratic party believe, at primary time, that Roosevelt is the only candidate who can save the Democratic party and keep them in office, Roosevelt will be renominated if a third term can be forced on him. If they think that Cordell Hull, or John Nance Garner, or Bennett Champ Clark, or Vic Donahey is more likely to win, not having a third-term prejudice to overcome, they are apt to defeat Roosevelt for a renomination even if he should want it.

Again Harry Utilities

On Income Tax Returns

It is rather interesting that, right in the midst of all the talk about peace between the administration and the electric industry, somebody—no one is willing apparently to take the responsibility for going so far—opened the door to further harrying of the utilities on the question of income tax returns.

The first announcement of what had happened was that an executive order had been issued under which the TVA investigating committee could look at any or all income tax returns of the utilities. The executive order was so broad in scope that it not only permitted all the corporation income tax returns, but the individual ones as well. And it applied to every utility in the United States!

When questions were raised by Republican members of the committee, at its next meeting thereafter, Francis Biddle, this committee's counsel, said that all that had been wanted were the corporation income tax returns of the Tennessee Electric Power company. No returns of any other utility corporation would be used, he said, nor would any personal income tax returns.

But, as Rep. Charles A. Wolverton immediately pointed out, the executive order provided for all utility corporations, and for all individual income returns based on utility corporations. He said that the investigators of the committee would thus have access to all such returns they might care to look at, regardless of what might be selected for use in the committee hearing.

Whereupon Mr. Biddle produced the original request, which was limited in scope, as he had said. His letter was addressed to Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr. So there seems to be quite a mystery as to the stage in the journey of these papers when the scope was widened to include all.

Committee Members in Dark Over Executive Order

It is also interesting that the members of the committee did not know anything about this request for an executive order until more than a week after it had been issued, save as they may have read it in the newspapers. Not only the Republican members were in ignorance; the Democratic members were as well. Chairman Vic Donahey, senator from Ohio, rushed in to take the responsibility when the discussion grew hot, but he was careful merely to say that he took responsibility, not that he had authorized the action in advance. Actually he knew nothing about it until it had been accomplished.

Actually, also, the scope of the committee's investigation, broad as it is, does not contemplate an inquiry into the negotiations that the utilities are now conducting to sell their properties in TVA territory to TVA and to the various communities which are about to acquire their own distribution systems.

The chief item of interest, Mr. Biddle contends, is whether the companies now negotiating for the sale of their properties have allowed as much depreciation, in computing the value of their plants, as they charged off in their income tax returns before computing profits on which they would pay corporation income taxes.

Hitler's Actions Cost Reich Return of Former Colonies

Hitler's actions since the Munich conference which partially dismembered Czechoslovakia have cost the Reich return of those of her former colonies held now by Great Britain and France. This is the almost unanimous opinion of the diplomatic corps here, though of course no individual is speaking for quotation.

It is common knowledge in diplomatic circles that Prime Minister Chamberlain promised Hitler that the question of the return of the German colonies would be promptly taken up. It is common knowledge also that this was really the intention, in perfect good faith, of the British government. The knowledge is not nearly so definite, but certainly the impression in diplomatic circles in London, Paris and Washington was that France also would restore the German colonies.

This was not only the intention, so far as the British government was concerned, but practical steps were under way. For example, a very considerable government activity, which had been planned for years in one of these former German, now British, colonies in South Africa and was about to be started, was abandoned shortly after Munich. Those concerned were simply told that the government was no longer interested.

No definite step backward in this program has been recorded since the recent Jewish outrages, but there has been an obvious political change, resulting from the temper of the people. Both British and French spokesmen have reassured critics, promising that there would be no restoration of colonies.

World Indignation Aroused Over Treatment of Jews

The argument is now being made that to turn a colony over to Germany would result in the same fate for the Jews living there that befell the Jews who were living in Sudetenland. Catholics and certain other denominations have joined in the fear that their own co-religionists would suffer if Germany were given sovereignty again over these overseas territories. But far transcending the effects on any of these groups is the national indignation that has welled up in Britain and France, surpassing any wave of world indignation since the Armenian massacres of more than 40 years ago.

The German situation will also result in tremendous pressure in the next session of congress for relaxation of the present immigration restrictions so as to permit persecuted Jews and others from Germany, Austria and Sudetenland to enter the United States.

Still Coughing?

No matter how many medicines you have tried for your common cough, chest cold, or bronchial irritation, you may get relief now with Creomulsion. Serious trouble may be brewing and you cannot afford to take a chance with any remedy less potent than Creomulsion, which goes right to the seat of the trouble and aids nature to soothe and heal the inflamed mucous membranes and to loosen and expel germ-laden phlegm.

Even if other remedies have failed, don't be discouraged, try Creomulsion. Your druggist is authorized to refund your money if you are not thoroughly satisfied with the benefits obtained. Creomulsion is one word, ask for it plainly, see that the name on the bottle is Creomulsion, and you'll get the genuine product and the relief you want. (Adv.)

Enough Power to Run Denver Used by Broadway 'Flashers'

NEW YORK.—If the Broadway of 15 years ago was a "Great White Way" it seems dim by comparison with the sea of twinkling, dancing lights that greet a spectator today.

In the 27 blocks between Times square and Columbus circle are 111,000 incandescent lamps and 22 miles of neon tubing, all used for advertising displays. When all these signs are flashing, blinking and spinning at once, they use energy at the rate of 3,250,000 watts an hour, enough power to light a city the size of Denver.

The first major electrical display was erected in 1892 on New York's Flatiron building, and signs were much the same until 1912 when Frank C. Reilly of Chicago constructed a "running" sign which told a constantly changing story in letters which moved across the lamp field. This device worked much like a player piano. Later the system was improved by placing electrical elements in the individual letters.

Neon tubing was given one of its first commercial uses in December, 1925, when it lettered the words

"Ben Hur" above a Times square theater. Today an estimated 60 per cent of all New York electrical advertisements are neon, many of them combining neon with bulbs.

Meanwhile a new field has been developed for electric bulbs in animated "flashers." The pioneer of this business is Douglas Leigh, a 28-year-old southern "boy wonder" who acquired rights on a European invention. One of his signs is a cigarette advertisement which runs a full five minutes, while another advertises chewing gum by depicting a colorful group of fish.

Frames for these huge animated ads are designed in checkerboard fashion. For each change in movement—even the slightest raising of an arm—some of the squares in the checkerboard must be "knocked out." All these motions are photographed on a motion picture film when the sign is planned. After the "spectacular" has been erected the film is projected on a battery of photoelectric cells in the control room. These cells relay the impression to the sign itself.

Early Mailing Helps Postman Avoid Problem of Yule Rush

Public Always Waits Until Last Minute Despite Tearful Pleas

If Christmas mailers didn't wait until the last minute with their cards and packages, post office officials predict the annual Yule rush would be minimized immensely. But despite tearful pleas each December, the bulk of holiday mail falls into post offices, less than seven days before Christmas. What the public really fears, say officials, is that their gifts will be delivered too soon before Christmas. As a result all too many gifts don't arrive until after Christmas! "Mail today," is the plea of the heavily burdened postmen below.

Nature's Yuletide Gift

From verdant forests throughout northern America, trees to grace the nation's Christmas morning are shipped each year. This picture was taken in Maine, where 1,500,000 trees are being felled for the holidays, to be loaded for shipment to all parts of the United States.

Colorado Town Revives Ritual Of Log Burning

PALMER LAKE, COLO.—Residents of this high-perched town on the great Divide celebrate their modern Christmas in an old-fashioned way, by burning the traditional yule log.

Each year the log is secretly cut, notched and tied with hempen cord, hidden among the trees and rocks awaiting the finder to whom goes the honor of dragging it into town.

Last year for the first time Palmer Lake burned its yule log in the town hall, where local firemen built a huge stone fireplace wide enough to accommodate a four-foot log. Previously the celebration was held in a private home where fewer guests could be accommodated.

The hunt for the yule log starts at 1 p. m., when all participants are summoned by a bugle to meet in front of the hall.

The yule log has a colorful history. In Scandinavia, where Thor, the god of thunder, was worshiped, great log fires were built along the rocky shores both at mid-summer and mid-winter in order to propitiate him for his rumbling wrath.

When the early fathers substituted the feast of the Nativity for that of Mithra, the Persian sun god who was worshiped on December 25 in early Rome, a different note crept in. Yuletide became a time for feuds to cease.

In England, before the Reformation, bringing in the yule log was an important part of the Christmas festivities. The community usually gathered in the hall of the lord of the manor, where the log was kindled with due ceremony and all partook in the wassail cup, a sweet cider flavored with fruits and spices.

Minstrel's Shrine

This monument at Oberndorf, Austria, honors Joseph Mohr, who wrote the words to "Holy Night," and Franz Gruber, who wrote the music for one of the world's most beloved Christmas hymns.

Christmas Wreath 'King' Started as Shoemaker

WINSLOW MILLS, MAINE.—Thrown out of work when a shoe factory closed last year, Mervin Flanders came back to his home town and set himself up as the leader of Maine's Christmas decoration business. Flanders' success story started with a ball of string, some barrel hoops, some spruce boughs and a little ambition. Now he's perfected a gadget that speeds up the wreath-making process by ten times. Shoemaking, he says, can't compare to the wreath business.

CHRISTMAS FIRE HAZARDS

Lighted Christmas candles in the window look nice but they may ignite the curtains. Fire experts warn that extreme care must be observed in using candles and other Yuletide illumination.

Lesson for December 11

THE SIN OF COVETOUSNESS

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:17; Luke 12:15-21; I Timothy 6:6-10.
GOLDEN TEXT—Thou shalt not covet.—Exodus 20:17.

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education; used by permission.

"The word of God is quick, and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart" (Heb. 4:12). These are the words that came to the writer's mind as he read the Scripture portions assigned for this lesson. He would fain have set aside his own comments and used this column to print the words from the Bible. If any reader of these lines purposes to read just these efforts to expound the truth, and not to read the Bible itself, let me plead with you to stop here and turn to God's Word. Let its powerful truth grip your soul and change your life.

It seems peculiarly appropriate that this lesson on covetousness should come right in the midst of our preparations for Christmas, for it directs our attention away from things to God, from outward preparation to the preparation of the heart, from greedy desire to true liberality of heart. Christmas may be literally "made over" for all of us if we receive its truth.

I. A Command (Exod. 20:17).

"Thou shalt not covet."

This last commandment carries us "beyond the domain of civil magistracy into that intellectual realm of motive, desire, and thought, where God alone is Lord and Judge" (Dykes). It deals with the heart, out of which are all the issues of life. It reaches to the root of so much that is wicked and destructive in the world—the covetousness of man. The love of money makes men lie, steal, kill, cheat; in fact, "the whole realm of human interrelations is disorganized and broken up by the dishonoring of the tenth commandment" (Morgan).

II. A Warning (Luke 12:13-21).

"Beware of covetousness."

The teaching of this passage is so directly opposite to all ideas regarding such matters accepted by the world at large, that it may be a total surprise to some readers and attendants at Bible school.

The yardstick of success in the world—for an individual, and organization, or a nation; yes, even for many a church—is the possession of wealth, or property, or other "things." Write it then in large letters on the hearts and minds of our boys and girls, "A man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth" (v. 15).

The one who was known to his friends (and to himself) as "a rich man" (v. 16), but whom God knew as a "fool" (v. 20), had more than he could use for himself. He had to build new and bigger barns, and could not see the "barns" that were already prepared, for, as Ambrose says, "Thou hast barns—the bosoms of the needy, the houses of widows, the mouths of orphans and infants." He was a fool who loved money for himself. One wonders what he had to say for himself when that very night he was called into the presence of God to give an account of his stewardship (v. 20). If you are similarly situated and have the same attitude, what will you say in that day?

An important point which we must note is that Jesus expressly repudiated the connecting of His name with the so-called "social gospel" in His reply (v. 14) to the question of the covetous fellow who regarded his inheritance as of more importance than brotherly love. Those who are ignoring the gospel of redemption and claiming Jesus as a social reformer or the "judge and divider" of some new economic solution for the world's ills, need to read and ponder this verse. Every Christian is interested deeply in social problems, but knows that the first concern of Christ and His followers is the souls of men.

III. A Way of Victory (I Tim. 6:6-10).

"Godliness with contentment."

As a minister of the gospel the writer would first remind himself that this was written by Paul to the preacher Timothy. Brethren in the ministry, let us not fall into the temptation and snare that comes with the love of money.

In this dizzy age when many are so intent on making money that they have no time for home and children, church and fellowship; when men neglect their responsibilities and duties as citizens to get gain; when any dirty business is all right if it produces a profit; when "for gold men betray their country, their friends, their God, their immortal souls" (Farrar)—yes, in this day let us remind men that "we brought nothing into this world, and it is certain that we can carry nothing out." Let us teach and exemplify in our lives the fact that the only real and worth while gain in life is "godliness with contentment."

WHAT to EAT and WHY

C. Houston Goudiss Discusses the Child Who Has a Lagging Appetite; Tells What to Do for the Finicky Eater

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

IT HAS been well said that with the knowledge of nutrition now at the command of practically every mother, there should not be one ill-nourished child in our land. Unfortunately, statistics show that possibly one-half of the children in this country are either underweight, undernourished or malnourished.

Many factors may be responsible for this state of affairs. Some children are fed incorrectly owing to the fact that the family income is small and the mother has not learned how to utilize low-cost foods that are rich in protective minerals and vitamins in place of those that are higher priced. In other families, the mothers do not realize the importance of providing a well-rounded diet for growing children. But the problems of these homemakers are more easily remedied, perhaps, than those of mothers who plan a well-balanced diet, but find that their child lacks interest in, or even refuses to eat the food that has been prepared so carefully.

Developing the Right Attitude
Strange as it may seem, such difficulties often arise because a mother fails to give the necessary consideration to developing in the young child a proper attitude toward food. Some children need to be taught that they must eat enough food for their body requirements. It is part of the training they should have in early childhood, so that they develop a willingness to eat what is put before them, to try new foods when offered, and to become increasingly independent in making a wise selection at mealtimes.

If a child has been properly conditioned in these respects from his earliest years, mothers will seldom find themselves faced with a "child who will not eat."

Problem of Anorexia

All normal children will, at times, exhibit a lack of appetite. We are not concerned here with occasions when a child who usually eats well feels no desire for food. Such lack of appetite may mean the beginning of a cold or some other illness and should be carefully investigated. Unfortunately, however, many mothers of young children are faced with a chronic lack of appetite in their children—a condition that physicians describe as anorexia. In order to correct this condition, it is necessary to understand its causes and to use wisdom in helping to remove them.

Find the Causes

When a child chronically lacks interest in food, the mother should set about systematically to learn the reasons why. Possibly the co-operation of your physician will be required, for sometimes obscure physical causes may be responsible, such as faulty elimination, diseased tonsils or teeth or some other focal infection. On the other hand, it frequently occurs that a changed attitude on the part of the mother in presenting food is all that is necessary to alter completely a child's attitude in regard to his meals.

It is interesting to note, however, that in studying a large group of children with poor appetites, one investigator found that 82 per cent of the children were more than average in height and narrow in body build.

Faulty Diet May Destroy Appetite

Frequently, a child's lack of interest in food may be traced directly to poor choice among the foods presented to him. It has been repeatedly demonstrated, for example, that when the diet lacks vitamin B, appetite decreases, so that there is less desire for food of any kind. Then, too, when a child's diet contains too much fat, digestion may be delayed and this in turn may interfere with the appetite for the next meal. While some children thrive better with a between-meal feeding, in others it seems to destroy appetite for the meal that is to follow. And with some children, "fussiness" at mealtimes may be due to the fact that their diet contains too many concentrated foods, too few crisp raw ones that stimulate appetite.

Fatigue a Factor

Occasionally, a child does not eat well merely because he is too tired. Even though he obtains adequate sleep at night, too much or too prolonged exercise or excitement may result in fatigue during the day. If a child spends too much time with adults, overstimulation may be the result. And in the case of older children, their school work may be troubling them.

Another frequent cause of lagging appetite is the constant nervous tension to be observed in some households. If a child is allowed to become unhappy, angry, or worried over some uncompleted school assignment, it may interfere seriously with his appetite and consequently with his nutrition. With younger children, the fact that they are able to attract favorable attention from adults by refusing to eat often stimulates them to repeat their refusal as long as mother shows concern over their antics.

Parents' Attitude Important

This brings us to perhaps the most important factor in dealing with the young, finicky eater who eats sparingly and whose dislikes usually far outnumber his likes. Such a child must be encouraged tactfully to eat a wide variety of foods, but mothers must not be over-solicitous, nor must they become obviously angry or irritated when the child refuses food. Scolding, punishment and threats of punishment should be avoided, as they defeat their purpose. Remember, too, that precept is a powerful teacher, and that a child's dislike for certain foods may have been instilled by a none-too-guardedly expressed dislike of a similar food on the part of an adult.

Some Helpful Hints

It may be necessary for the entire family to live more quietly, in order to give the finicky eater a chance to be quiet and relaxed. There must be regularity of meals and mealtimes must be peaceful. Keep the table conversation general and impersonal in character before older children. See to it that younger ones eat by themselves.

Often a short rest before meals will help a child to become relaxed completely. And frequently, a new method of presenting foods will result in a changed attitude on the part of the child.

Foods for young children should not be seasoned too highly. In general, condiments should be avoided. Strong-flavored vegetables, as a rule, are not well liked, and if introduced in the young child's diet should be combined with some familiar, and mild-tasting food. In cooking vegetables, keep the pieces large enough so that the child can identify what he is eating. Include a crisp food in each meal.

Finally, remember that a child's eating habits cannot be changed overnight. Changes should be introduced gradually, so that he is scarcely aware of what is going on.

HOW TO RELIEVE COLDS

Simply Follow These Easy Directions to Ease the Pain and Discomfort and Sore Throat Accompanying Colds

1. To ease pain and discomfort and reduce fever take 2 Bayer Tablets—drink a glass of water. Repeat in 2 hours.

2. If throat is raw from cold, crush and dissolve 3 Bayer Tablets in 1/2 glass of water... gargle.

THE SIMPLE WAY pictured above often brings amazingly fast relief from discomfort and sore throat accompanying colds.

Try it. Then—see your doctor. He probably will tell you to continue with the Bayer Aspirin because it acts so fast to relieve discomforts of a cold. And to reduce fever.

This simple way, backed by scientific authority, has largely supplanted the use of strong medicines in easing cold symptoms. Perhaps the easiest, most effective way yet discovered. But make sure you get genuine BAYER Aspirin.

Colored Soap Bubbles.—A drop of prepared vegetable tinting added to the water used for making soap bubbles will give them a different color and thus delight the children.

Heat Tea Leaves.—Tea tastes better and goes much further if, when you open a new packet, you spread the tea on a sheet of clean paper and place it in an oven that is just warm for about ten minutes.

Sugar Cookies.—Sugar sprinkled over the tops of cookies before putting them into the oven forms a sweet crust and makes a richer cookie.

Wise and Otherwise

Walkers are saying that a pedestrian crossing is a dash between two dotted lines.

You never can tell. Many a half-baked millionaire has more crust than dough. "What's wrong with the girl of today?" asks a poster. Perhaps that she wasn't born yesterday.

Even Solomon with a thousand wives must have wondered at times if he wouldn't have been happier if he had married somebody else.

Shopkeepers call it "sales resistance." The rest of us think it's the triumph of mind over pater.

Oversized Sheets.—Because some sheets shrink five to ten inches, it is better to buy those considerably wider than the mattress on which they are to be used.

Bones for Soup.—When buying bone roasts be sure the butcher sends you the bones even if they have to be removed. The bones can be used for making soups and stock for stews.

Tips on Gluing.—The wood must be dry and free from oil, paint or other coatings that fill its surface pores. Joint surfaces must fit together smoothly, without "hills and valleys." Always sand and brush dust off surfaces to be glued. Spread glue over both surfaces as a thin film—never thickly.

More Desirable.—If you cannot afford a good wood when buying furniture, it is wise to keep to the painted sort. The painted furniture gives a dainty and colorful appearance that is more to be desired than cheaper grades of stained wood.

When Cords Wear Out.—Worn extension cords on lamps or other electrical fixtures should be replaced promptly. The cost is small compared to a burned down house or a severe shock. When the wires bend too easily where they enter the connections or when the outside silk covering wears out, it is time to buy new cords.
